Bike to Work Day is canceled

After careful consideration of federal, state and local public health recommendations, Way to Go has made the difficult decision to cancel all in-person Bike to Work Day festivities in 2020. The event had previously been postponed from June 24 to Sept. 22.
But we’re still celebrating cycling!

But just because the event is canceled, doesn’t mean the fun is canceled! Way to Go will celebrate cycling virtually during the week of Sept. 21. Recognizing many of us have yet to return to an office or worksite, you can pledge to ditch the car and opt for the bike – whether it’s to ride to a workplace, the store, the park, or the coffee shop. In other words: Bike to Wherever! This is a great opportunity to give biking a try for the first time, or to just voice your support for biking in the Denver region. Visit the Bike to Wherever website to learn more and pledge to ride that week.

Can’t wait until September? No problem. Join Way to Go’s Summer Bike Challenge, which has been running since June. The Summer Bike Challenge is a great opportunity to win prizes just by hopping on your bike. Learn more and join in the fun.

Great news: You can still purchase fun Bike to Work Day 30th anniversary gear!
